Twenty-five years later, these two Boomers must come to grips with choices they made long ago. Eden's son Louie is now a social media star with his ambitions set on reality TV. Noah struggles with job loss and his odd friend Jivan, who holds a mysterious power over him. Eden regrets not being part of Louie's early life and wants to change that, but finds mothering a 25-year-old a daunting challenge. Thinking their troubles have mostly to do with middle age, the wrecked economy and professional failure, both Eden and Noah find themselves tested in ways they could not have predicted. In the process, they discover what it is that's essential, and what it is that lasts. Jim Arnold is the author of the award-winning novel Benediction.
