As early as 1875 the question was discussed and strongly advocated by Ansel K. Tisdale, a Dover veteran of the Civil War. The subject was kept alive through the years by Mr. Tisdale and later had the active support of George L. Howe, Jedediah W. Higgins, and other residents. Some years ago a nucleus for the erection of a soldiers monument was formed by setting aside a part of the annual appropriation made by the town for the observance of Memorial Day. The question of the erection of a monument took definite shape in 1909, when Irving Colburn, Lewis B. Paine, and J. Grant Forbes were appointed a Soldiers Monument Committee. The monument fund having steadily grown under the fostering care of those especially interested in the project, the town voted at the annual March meeting in 1910 to add a sum sufficient to erect a dignified monument, the whole matter being put in charge of the standing committee. Messrs. Richardson, Barott Richardson were selected as architects. Their design of a monument in honor of all the soldiers who had represented Dover in the wars of the country was accepted by the town, and the...
