Bibliogov, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 246 x 189 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Roughly a month after taking command of Bravo Company, 302nd Military Intelligence Battalion (Tactical Exploitation System) in November 2002, Major Art La Flamme received his deployment order and, by January, was at Ahmed Al Jaber Airbase in Kuwait preparing to provide the exploitation of theater and national capabilities in support of V Corps requirements for what soon became Operation Iraqi Freedom. This included direct U2 downlink and processing signals, electronic and communications intelligence. As La Flamme explained, he operated under the information sharing credo of, Shove it down their throats. His company would thus find any and every way to ramp up the system s capabilities and those of the soldiers, put it all together in useful analysis and get it to anybody and everybody who could use it which involved jumping deep into bed with the Air Force a subject he discusses at length. We were doing dynamic, on-the-fly retraining of soldiers he said, to try to develop, teach and implement a way of using an Army corps-level asset and national and theater collection platforms to speed up and make close air support more effective and efficient. Notably, La Flamme s unit provided intel overwatch for the April 2003 rescue of PFC Jessica Lynch but, he said, Our primary mission was finding stuff to kill all the while providing V Corps with any conceivable piece of intelligence they could need. In addition, he recounts his three main intelligence coups but also laments how his unit s mission dropped off to almost nothing as Phase III (major combat) transitioned into Phase IV (stability and support operations). La Flamme was later tasked with sending soldiers to Abu Ghraib Prison...
